The Lloyd papers forms part of a larger collection of Solicitors papers donated by a Limerick City Law firm to the City Archives. Much of the collection has been listed as individual deeds but some material has been listed as individual family collections.

The collection relates to various members of the Lloyd family who held land in the townlands of Portnard in Cappamore, and Towerhill in Pallasgreen through the eighteenth and nineteenth century . They also held land in Beechmount, Rathkeale and in Newtown Pery, Limerick City while a relative Reverend Edward Lloyd (d c.1794) also held land in Ballincollig, county Cork.

Section A of the collection relates to Thomas Lloyd of Towerhill and Fantstown Castle . Thomas was the son of William Lloyd of Towerhill, who had married Jane Fitzgerald and four sons. Thomas had four brothers, Reverend Rickard of Castle Lloyd, co. Limerick, Rector of Cullen and Oola, William of Towerhill, Edward and Thomas.

This section includes a marriage settlement and mainly relates to the division of Thomas's estate among his children from two marriages. Richard, William and Edward from his first marriage and three sons and three daughters from a second marriage. Two of these sons died young while Thomas and three sisters Jane, Francis and Mary survived to claim part of their fathers estate, a process that generated a great deal of legal opinions and cases.

The next section (B) relates to Thomas's brother, Reverend Rickard Lloyd of Castle Lloyd and Newtown Pery includes correspondence with other members of the Lloyd family and property.

Section C relates to another brother, Edward Lloyd, possibly the third son of Thomas Lloyd and includes a marriage agreement, a will and property transactions.

Section D includes two items relating to a fourth brother William Lloyd, which includes a case from solicitor John Fitzgibbon writing ' the inhabitants of the city of Limerick cannot be prevailed upon to present money sufficient for the repair of the streets which are in a bad state.' P67/50 (10 June 1772)

Section E is a relatively large section and is concerned with the affairs of Reverend Edward Lloyd of Newtown Pery and William Street, Limerick, and relates mainly to requests for family members for financial support and demands, notably from a relative Maria Moore. These provide an insight into the dependency of the middle class protestant landowning class on inherited wealth. The series of letters between Maria Moore and her husband to her brother Reverend Edward Lloyd illustrate this dependency. 'surely you cannot have any objection to our request being the first payment from you, it has hurt her spirits very much to feel herself so totally forgotten and having so very large a sum of money due her'. (P67/62, 20 April 1800, p1). These letters also provide an insight into social aspects of their lives as Moore writes of her fifteen year old daughter's acceptance of a marriage proposal and her husband mentions a visit to the Spa at Mallow to take the waters. (P67/65) The family correspondence in this section reflects the contemporary political 1798 rebellion in Ireland; 'martial law was proclaimed there on June 2nd' P67/58, 3 June 1798.

The nineteenth century family members are dealt with under Section F, G and H while section J relates to the last incumbent of Portnord House, Catherine Lloyd and the sale of the estate under the land commission. This section also includes receipts from local suppliers.

Section K relates to legal material concerning title to the barony of Counagh and includes a copy of the distribution of the barony of Counagh listing proprietors names and holdings. (P67/124.) This section also includes a notice to the occupiers of land to bring their leases and maps for inspection in order that 'future Applotments will be more equally made and the Poor will be eased of a Burthen they have but too just reason to complain of' (P67/125, October 1762)

Section L includes material relating to the national land agitation of the late nineteenth century and includes copies of public letters from the leaders of the land movement then in jail. Includes a copy of a notice to 'The people of Ireland, Pay No rent, Avoid the Land Court, Hold the Harvest, No Rent. By Order Patrick Egan Treasurer.(p126)

The final section relates to household recipies and remedies and these offer an excellent insight into domestic life in the eighteenth and nineteenth century as they include advice on how to lay out an orchard and sow potatoes, and how to make a paste for cleaning teeth, a recipe for rat poison and remedies for sciatica, fever, rheumatism and gout, including remedies for curing animals(P67/136, 2 February 1910). As the collection spans from 1682 to 1913 these documents are an excellent source for social and medical history. These are very rare and valuable documents which are very useful for the study of social and medical history.

This is a very useful collection of family papers as it spans a very wide period from 1682-1913 and contains some very interesting documents including wills, marriage settlements and numerous legal opinions on cases which provide a detailed insight into how property and marriage were intertwined. It is also a useful source for social and political history as contemporary events are reflected in the families correspondence.

67. 22 October 1800 Letter from Captain James Moore, Worcester, England to Reverend Edward Lloyd, saying he had a letter from Lt. William Lloyd who also complains 'very fondly', of never having received any money from Reverend Edward since the death of their father, late Mr. E. Lloyd sixteen years ago, and from the documents of the debts then due, think it very extraordinary if the debts are not perfectly cleared off – he also mentioned your [idea] of carrying the lawsuit with Mr. Grady to the House of Lords, which he will not consent to, nor shall we, or any part of the family concede to having any more money frittered away in law, as too much has already been lavished on it, too many years have lapsed without answering any purpose, but robbing the children of their property'.p1

68. 16 July 1802 Letter from Maria Moore, Kinsale, to Reverend Edward Lloyd, writing that she has a marriage proposal for her daughter

Jane who is fifteen years old, from a Major Armstrong who is thirty five, and she is looking for an estimate of her fortune before the comes to a decision on it; She also asks him not to hold any resentment towards them, for the letters written in previous years, stating they were in a difficult situation in a strange country and that she valued his friendship more than any money; she requests that he advance her one hundred pounds.

3pp

69. 9 January 1803 Letter from Maria Moore, Kinsale, to Reverend Edward Lloyd, asking for his assistance, her rent is due, but she has no money to pay with and forty guineas is needed, she goes on to say her daughter Jane married Major Armstrong.

4pp

70. 21 May 1804 Letter from Maria Moore, Kinsale, to Reverend Edward Lloyd looking for an advance of, '£100.00 or £50.00 pounds as you cannot think what an advantage it would be to us in our wine business, for it is absolutely necessary for a wine merchant to have in his cellars a variety of wines, as different people have different tastes'. 'Recollect my dear Edward when I request money from you, that this the arrears of the £30.00 a year which I am getting'. ..p1 She writes of her daughter Jane who married Major Armstrong, and resided in Trim, Co, Meath, that they have a baby boy eight months old, whom she has not yet met, because of her business commitments, and the Major's army duties does not allow them to visit her.

71. 15 October 1804 Letter from Maria Moore, requesting a hundred pounds from the arrears due to her, 'It would assist us very much just now, as our cellar wants an additional stock of wines very much, nothing could be of so much advantage to us as having our cellar well stocked as the Military are very particular', ... I may tell you the effect on my mind has been to destroy the sympathy I would have felt had the [lop] arisen from causes over which he had no control, a man who plays ducks and drakes with his money in this way must just bear the consequences'.(p1 18 February 1887) In a subsequent letter Rickard replied; 'As you blame me rather freely, I think it only right to explain, that though I deserve a good deal of blame myself for want of foresight, yet much of my difficulties arise from causes over which I had no control'. (p1 20 February 1887) to which Mr. Ford replies that 'you are much less blameable than I supposed'.(p1 23 February 1887). Rickard replied to Mr. Ford 'My dear Mr. Ford, I have to thank you sincerely for the friendly tone of your letter received this morning, I am glad you do not think me so very culpable, but I must always fully blame myself for my want of caution, The only thing to be done now is to lay the experience to heart and make the best of my circumstances as they are. I have every hope of being able to arrange affairs so as to keep a farm in my own hands, about 150 acres, for which I will pay a fair rent. But as I must sell all my stocks to satisfy the arrangement with my creditors. I look forward to hard times and difficulty for a good while until I can fit stock together again. Your kindly offered loan will be a great help to replace the stock, and I will gladly avail myself of it, as soon as my arrangements are complete and I can say I am free from liabilities which at present I cannot say, Isabella received from Agnes the £60.00 given with such kind intentions. Thanking you and her again.'p1-2, 26 February 1887)
