PALAU MOXÓ

The Palau Moxó was one of the most prominent private residences of the 18th century, built between 1730 and 1750 by the Master of Works of Barcelona Cathedral.

HISTORY OF THE ROOMS

Sant Mori was the Moxó family's grand ballroom and the Palau's greatest treasure. It retains a magnificent ceiling (said to have been a wedding gift) with a modern circular pendant lamp.

Montcortés overlooking the square and Basilica of Sant Just, was used for the Moxó family's social gatherings.

Rocabertí was the family dining room. Its most striking feature is the gallery of four arches opening onto the Palau's grand staircase.

The Mirrors Chambre was the Moxó couple's noble bedroom, boasting imposing mirrored doors, unique in Barcelona.

The Palau's former library is an intimate and elegant space with access to the Italian courtyard. It retains the essence of British drawing rooms of the period and features a marble fireplace with the family crest.

The Italian outdoor Courtyard was conceived as an open-air reception area, where the Marquesses received their guests during important summer occasions.
