PRIDE 91

Well, it's that time of year again. In less than a month's time, more than 30,000 of you will be marching through the streets of London and partying in Kennington Park, on the nearest Saturday in June to the anniversary of the Stonewall riots.

We hope you are all looking forward to 29th June as much as we are. True, the day will be a very hard day's work for all of us on the Pride committee, but it will also be the culmination of a years' work and planning. It will be a day when the satisfaction of knowing you helped organise "all this" just about outweighs the worry of whether everything will go anywhere near to plan. The biggest worry by far will be the weather. If there's a downpour on June 29th, the year's efforts could go down the drain along with the rainwater.

Well, who are 'we'? The Lesbian And Gay Pride Organising Committee (LAGPOC) are just as we always have been: an enthusiastic group who want to put together an event to celebrate our sexuality. Over the last five years the event has consistently expanded to become one of Europe's biggest free events. Of course, that means more money to raise, more administration and a greater responsibility to account for what we spend, to the people we receive it from in the first place - you.

"running Pride for you"

LAGPOC has now followed the example of groups like CND and Liberty and become LAGPOC Ltd, a company limited by guarantee. "Pride Goes Private" is a headline you may have spotted in the gay press recently. Somehow, this conjures up the image of a large, profit-orientated organisation with shares about to go on sale through the major high street banks! We may have changed our structure, but we're not about to start spending your money advertising on prime-time TV, simply to remind you that LAGPOC is "running Pride for you"!

Individual members of the committee are no longer financially liable and open to personal prosecution for any loss, just like many other social organisations that have taken on the security of limited company status. Also, we now have a legal obligation to have our accounts, minutes and constitution available for public scrutiny. Pride has not been hijacked for private gain, nor has the organising committee been turned into an exclusive club. On the contrary, the committee has now become even more open to new members, with over half of us joining in the last few months.

"the money to stage Pride does not come from grants or public funding"

The biggest task we face each year is raising the money needed. Contrary to popular belief, the money to stage Pride does not come from grants or public funding, but from schemes like Friends of Pride, merchandising and collections in pubs and clubs. The highly successful Winter Pride event is another way in which we raise money for the day. Even this magazine, apart from publicising the event and acting as a programme, is an important source of income.

We hope you are going to enjoy this magazine and that you have a great time if you participate in the Pride events themselves. Please remember that we are the same as you and would be more than happy to receive any of your comments and ideas to improve Pride, both as an organisation and as an event.

BACK ON THE AGENDA

David Smith finds plenty to celebrate in the last 12 months in lesbian and gay politics.

Who would have thought, at this time last year, that by the time Pride 1991 came around Margaret Thatcher would have gone from power and have been replaced by a prime minister who is supposed to be in favour of legislation to protect lesbians and gay men from discrimination and in favour of a lowering of the gay male age of consent from 21 to 18?

Who would have thought

Who would have thought 12 months ago that the age of consent could even have been talked about in polite circles, let alone that law reform would be back on the political agenda? And yet it has happened; Margaret Thatcher has gone, and with her has gone at least some of the baggage of dogmatic Christian moralising that had become such a hallmark of her reign. As Pride 1991 gets underway, for example, the Chief Constable of Greater Manchester's police force, Sir James 'cesspit' Anderton is only weeks away from retirement.

12 months ago the London lesbian and gay community was still reeling from the shock of the death of actor Michael Boothe in the worst queerbashing murder case for several years. My own research published in HIM magazine had almost simultaneously drawn attention to record levels of arrests and prosecutions for gay sexual offences; record levels which had been achieved by relentless and often highly dubious police operations in public toilets.

Who would have thought, when

Bryan James

Bye, bye Maggie!

London's new direct action and civil disobedience organisation OutRage took to the streets for the first time in June last year to demand a reordering of police priorities, that within four months Metropolitan Police officers would be sitting down to the first of their now-regular discussions with representatives from a dozen lesbian and gay organisations?

The welcome appointment of Chief Superintendent Peter Stevens as the new head of Scotland Yard's Community Involvement Branch has been followed by announcements, from these meetings, of progress, not only on plans to monitor violent attacks on lesbians and gay men, but also on a re-examination of the amount of police resources put into surveillance of gay men in public toilets, and on progress towards a policy of equal opportunities for lesbians and gay men within the force.

OutRage took to the streets

At this time last year, who would have guessed that the force could even know, let alone state in public, that there were more lesbian and gay officers in London than there are black officers? Who would have dreamed that many dozens of officers throughout the country would be queuing to join the Lesbian and Gay Police Association to press for their own equal opportunities?

OutRage demonstrate outside Hyde Park public toilets against the indiscriminate arrest of gay men for cottaging.

There have been other successes too. A year ago, I don't believe we would have dared to hope that a government minister would back down in the face of protests about lesbian and gay rights in the way that health minister Virginia Bottomley did this April when she removed her offending sentence 'equal rights and gay rights have no place in fostering services' from Paragraph 16 of her guidelines to the Children Act.

Moreover, on the parallel issue of access to donor insemination for lesbians, the new Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority has been bending over backwards to offer a fair deal to all women. Who would have expected such apparently fair treatment?

Even at the beginning of this year things did not seem so bright. Paragraph 16, along with Clause 25 of the Criminal Justice Bill and the jailing of eight gay and bisexual men for consenting gay sadomasochistic sex, had created an unholy trinity of cases which threatened - though didn't quite manage - to spark a recreation of the mood of the protests against Section 28 of the Local Government Act three years ago. But this year's protests have not been in vain.

Insemination a fair deal?

The campaign against Clause 25, in particular, has borne important fruit. The possibility of large numbers of gay and bisexual men being sent to prison for cottaging or cruising or even just saying hello to someone in the street was always unlikely, but the clause's threat of longer prison sentences (even after the government amendment) will almost certainly come into play for breaches of the age of consent laws. But the effect of the public debate we have had about our confused, outdated and discriminatory sex laws has been dramatic.

Demonstration outside Bow Street police station to express outrage at the wording of clause 25

The campaign against Clause 25 has borne important fruit

Who would have thought 12 months ago that a home office minister - John Patten - or a home secretary so apparently anti-gay as former Conservative Party chairman Kenneth Baker could have been making encouraging noises about the possibility of reform of gay sexual offences law? Who would have believed that the Stonewall Group could confidently say that whoever wins the General Election, we will see a reduction in the age of consent from 21 to 18 within the next two years? Yes! Maggie is gone. And with a virtual amnesty from prosecution for any gay sex involving consenting men over the age of 16 now being operated in Scotland, the age of consent and the issue of law reform are well and truly back on the agenda.

Is there likely to be anyone at the Lesbian and Gay Pride festival who could put their hand on their heart and say that they could have foreseen a year filled with such enormously encouraging developments?

A PRIDE FOR EUROPE

In January this year the European region of the International Lesbian and Gay Association (ILGA) endorsed the plan that next year's U.K. Pride, in London, will be a Pride for Europe - the biggest, best and most fantastic yet. We are already well into the planning stage and are now on the hunt for performers from right across Europe for the various stages, ensuring the whole event has a continental flavour.

performers, bringing music and laughter that can cross all national boundaries, adding to the carnival atmosphere. We are also hoping that international organisations will hold their regular conferences in London, and we are asking British groups to host events for their European counter-parts. For instance, one group with a strong tradition of international relations are the leather clubs, so you see the emphasis needn't necessarily be on the political. In fact we hope that Europride will have a variety of events to appeal to anyone and everyone. With the biggest ever concentration of lesbians and gay men, anything and everything can happen.

Europride 1992

As the Committee we organise the day itself, but the Pride celebrations are much more than one day. All kinds of groups from all over the country organise events during the weeks leading up to Pride. We are now counting on their enthusiasm and co-operation more than ever to produce a Pride programme that will attract people from all over Europe.

1992's Euro-festival will be host to a wide range of art and entertainment and is not just intended to be a high-brow event. The UK has a great tradition of pub and cabaret

Europride is for people from right across Europe, of all creeds, colours and beliefs. Things are changing very fast, politically and socially. Europride will be fun: it will show our strength and self-confidence. It will prove our ability to support each other and to fight for our rights. But it won't happen without you! # WISH YOU WERE HERE!

Gay Pride already! And I've only just taken my Christmas tree down. Bloody hell, doesn't time fly when you're nearly twenty-five.

The other evening I was slumped in the corner of a well known bar, when a shifty looking chap attached himself to my side. He flashed some identification at me, put his trilby on the bar and said 'What were you doing when John Lennon was assassinated?' What a nerve! I'd already told the police of my whereabouts on that day in December. I had what Jimmy Cagney would call a water-tight alibi, and just because I'd had a row with Yoko in Selfridges over a cot-blanket, there was no need to go opening old wounds. Then he asked me what I was doing when Kennedy was assassinated! Who did this lunatic think I was - the Wirral serial killer? 'Anyone else?' I enquired 'Martin Luther King? Trotsky? Muffin the Mule?'

MY GRANDMOTHER, the beautiful Erica Von Savage after being hit by a flying sausage roll on the Wirral express. The family likeness is striking.

Now I'm not a violent person, and copper or no copper, I decided that this nosey bugger could do with a demonstration of the deadly skills that rocketed me to fame as Tara King's stunt woman. However, in between gasps (I had him on the floor and was in the process of belting him in the gob with my flip-flop) he managed to convey that he was from the Pride Committee and would I write another little article for the programme? Have these people never heard of telephones? They shouldn't be creeping up to lone sex-kittens in bars and asking them stupid questions. Apparently this year, Gay Pride is getting ready to go international. How marvellous! I'll be able to let the back-bedroom off to a strapping Dutch campaigner!

And the reason he was asking such probing questions was to see if my memory was still sound, as they wanted me to recall my trips abroad. I didn't hit him with my flip-flop, no I used a bottle instead. Bloody cheek!

Funny thing is, I can't remember what I was doing the day Kennedy was assassinated, but I can remember what little Billy Boggan was doing to me behind the biology lab. I was having a good time an' all until Sister Annuciata caught us and gave our ears a little tickle with a cricket bat.

As it happens I'm very international. All the Savages throughout the ages were as well. Yes we've travelled. My great-great-great-grandmother Beatrice Cattermole Savage started the trend way back in 1820, when she was transported to Australia for stealing two tea-towels and a bed jacket off her employer's washing line. I'm always terrified that Kylie is going to turn up as a long lost cousin.

Then in 1845 the Rosscommon Savages were forced to leave for America thanks to the Potato Famine and British landlords. We've always had trouble with bloody landlords. I'm still waiting for Lambeth to put a roof on my toilet. The most intrepid Savage however, was my beautiful German grandmother, Erica Von Savage, who, during the war, fled across the border from Birkenhead to Wigan whilst enemy snipers shot at her. We discovered years later that there were no snipers but somebody did throw a sausage roll at her on the train.

My sister Vera enjoys a spot of travel. She's always roaming around, usually in her nightie at four a.m., but thank God the police bring her home safely. She's been confused since her last boyfriend ran off with the owner of a pet crematorium.

With Miss L V M Savage

We often travel together. Our first excursion was when we went to Lourdes with the Probation Service. We're both big fans of 'Song of Bernadette' and we wanted to see if there were any hallucinogenic mushrooms growing in the grotto. Unfortunately, there weren't any so Vera had a go in the waters instead. I didn't fancy it after seeing Vera being whisked through the water at 80 miles an hour by two seven foot Belgian nuns with D.M.'s, like a Zanussi in full cycle. She was very quiet for the rest of the trip and only opened her mouth to complain about her verruca, and that turned out to be a lump of chewing gum with a rosary bead stuck in it!

FINLAND. Me after I was told that our contract had been extended for another month.

Religious experiences often happen to our Vera on holiday. For example, when we went to the Isle of Skye who do you think appeared? Sir Harry Seacombe! He was recording another 'Highway'. Vera went to pieces as she is a huge fan of Sir Harry's and swallowed ten Bob Martin's conditioning tablets thinking that they were pro-plus. They didn't make her any higher but her mac had a lovely sheen on it.

My daughter Bunty, however, took great exception to Harry, and screaming 'religious pariah' she flung a cowpat in the hood of his duffle coat and told him Jesus loved him but not as much as David Icke. I was mortified, right in the middle of his 'Love all God's good creatures'. I blame that polytechnic. She never used to have pierced nipples! Incidentally, Skye is a remarkable place. Remember Donovan, the hippy with the big chin? He named his daughter Skye because she was conceived there. If that's the case, I should have called our Bunty 'Llandudno'.

In this game you sometimes get to go on 'working holidays'. Lovely exotic locations like Tampara in Finland. Wonderful place that was, hot-bed of sin. How do you explain a city that has only one off-licence that's open for two hours a day and yet the entire city is blind drunk twenty-four hours a day. I took to my bed, so Adrella had to perform alone on a billiard table to half a dozen bemused lads while 'Just an old fashioned girl' was piped through a Muzak system that had only one speaker - and that was in the lift. As you can see by the photograph Finland took its toll on me, I'm still having therapy now.

Another working holiday was at

MY SISTER Vera Cheeseman, standing outside her chalet, Skegness '91.

Butlin's Holiday Camp in Skegness. 72 hours in a chalet with Eartha Kitt and double bunks. She kept nicking all me ciggies and using my buf-puf, but I said nothing. I couldn't even if I wanted to, I had the famous 'Skeggy throat' - a familiar complaint amongst campers - due to excessive alcohol intake, a diet of chips, and constant screaming, the latter usually performed between the hours of 9pm and 7am. In other words, a good time was had by all. And that's how Pride should be! Gay men and women enjoying themselves. A celebration. So fucking celebrate! Oh well, all this talk of holidays has given me itchy feet. So where to this year? The thought of going through customs always fills me with dread, they are beginning to recognise my 'rattle' as I wheel my Samsonite under their noses.

I had to wait 16 hours for a Dan Air flight once, and when I enquired about the delay I was informed by a steward with love-bites that they had been 'crop-spraying'. Not very encouraging news when you're travelling with a sister who has a dicky bladder. Maybe I'll push the boat out and invade some Caribbean island; I've got a bit of extra cash at the moment because I've just sold my flat. The council aren't aware of that fact yet. Sod' em anyway. I'll be in St Lucia.

See you on the March

Love Lily.

The not so Secret Diary of Pride,

age 21 and a bit

July 1st. Wow, what was that? When I woke up this morning I had a strange smile on my face, so something good must have happened!

September 9th. Still recovering and already some demented queen is suggesting that we hold another Winter Pride bash. Honestly, the thought of all those cheerful dykes and queens doing their Esther Williams meets Jaws impersonations in the olympic swimming pool makes me feel quite light headed.

December 10th. Under doctor's orders (so masterful!) and receiving valium by drip. I was rushed to (my) bed yesterday after coming over all queer in the incredibly popular and dead funky Winter Pride disco. All because some leather queen tried to let the wind out of the inflatable Muffin the mule I'd bought. I can't remember a thing about the actual fracas, but apparently I was caught doing things to the moustached one with a piece of apparatus I'd bought from one of those specialist stalls in the large and well stocked market area, on the third floor.

January 5th. Had an amusing meeting with those police people. This year they say that the parade can start in Milton Keynes at 5am (any day we want), whilst the floats assemble in Scunthorpe on April 12th, and they all meet for the Festival - to be held in the Roehampton Women's Institute on October 14th. Nice to see those dear Met people taking community policing to heart!

February 14th. A rather difficult meeting with the police. The floats (well they've said we can have three including the Reliant Robin) can now start at the same place as the parade, but the Thursday afterwards. Progress of a sort, I suppose.

February 19th. Found a new venue for the Festival: the Masonic Bowling Club in Macclesfield. Holds fifty but I'm assured they do a lovely spread.

March 7th. Had yet another LAGPOC meeting, watched some paint dry and was savaged by a sheep. Went straight home after.

Bob Wokeman

March 12th. Long range weather forecast for June gives a 90% chance of record high temperatures. Must remember to take up the hem on that new packamac.

March 22nd. T-shirts arrived today. Now let me get this right - we've got all the colours in all the sizes, in all the sleeve lengths, in all the designs . . . Oh, whatever happened to the 'one size' just saying what Frankie said?

April 5th. Ahh, the price of Portaloos these days! I remember when you could have an open stage, 300 Portaloos and a chicken Korma and still have change from £20,000.

April 15th. Placed an ad in the Mixed Personals column of the People's Friend: 'Wanted 300 stewards to meet with popular outgoing event in June. Phone Kevin on 071 738 8862..'. Money situation still tight. Have taken to wandering round pubs and clubs, shaking collecting buckets at the bemused. Honestly, the things an event has to do to pay for itself.

May 2nd. Started work on this year's magazine. The articles are flooding in: A Gay guide to Bognor, the odd pumpkin scone recipe . . . scintillating.

May 12th. So far, received three replies to the ad.

June 3rd. Magazine printed and distributed. Looks really good - though quite why the Orkney Wet Fish Traders Association wanted three dozen copies I'll never know. They must like scones.

June 21st. After threatening to show some interesting photos of the police commissioner in drag to the tabloids, the parade is starting at the Embankment on the same day as the Festival - which had to be moved to Kennington Park when the Roehampton W.I. was burned to the ground by a pack of rogue Brownies.

Nigel Horton

June 27th. The line up for the open stage is looking good. Erasure, Elton and Tina aren't sure yet. Luckily, the Gladys Allthorpe Formation Dance Troupe (Exeter) Ltd, have agreed to drop everything and save the day. Hope that by the time they hit the Open Stage the crowd will be so pissed that if we turn the lights down and switch backing tapes they'll never notice.

June 29th. P. Day - I'm all a-flutter. The weather forecasters (bless their frilly panties/jocks) say it should be fine - they think. Well, here goes . . .

TOGETHER

For many years now we have been getting together to celebrate our sexuality with a festival day called Pride. This year I'm looking forward to being part of that celebration but I need your support to achieve it. Let me explain.

Cast your mind back to when Aids was first heard about. The 'gay plague' they called it - something that could be got rid of by ridding the world of gays and lesbians. Many lesbian and gay people were killed or physically disabled by ignorant, stupid, heterosexual people. I remember - I was one of them.

they called it

This year I will be at lesbian and gay Pride in my wheelchair, enjoying the feeling of strength we all get by being OUT and PROUD together. I am just one of the many disabled lesbians and gays who will be there. This year I ask you to make us feel part of the gay and lesbian community by remembering our needs.

out and proud

Last year I and many of my disabled friends were made to feel inferior by the behaviour of some people. I was told by one woman I should be at home where I belonged. I find it surprising at such an event as Pride to be judged by my appearance.

Let's make this year one to remember. Let's be united in Pride. Let's make it a day for everyone, whether disabled, able-bodied, black, white, female, male, old or young. Let's be out and proud together.

THE PARADE

You'll Never Walk Alone

We are hoping that this year's Parade will be the biggest and best yet and we want you to be the star of it all. It's time to track down your best outfit, pump up the pecs, sew on the sequins or get that quaint twin set off to the cleaners. We want you to shine, shine, shine on June 29.

I'll Be There

The place to be is outside Embankment Tube Station for 1.30pm when the Parade sets off. The best way to get there and get a good look at the 15 amazing and colourful floats, will be to take the tube to Temple - on the District and Circle Line - arriving before 1.00pm. It's then just an excited stroll past those 15 gleaming examples of glamour, sensuality and sophistication, under Waterloo Bridge, to the starting point. But be early as it can take some time to get over 15,000 happy, singing, shouting (and so on...) people into a line!

It Ain't What You Do

During the parade to Kennington Park, turning more than a few heads on the way we hope, representatives from Pride will be in the thick of it, attempting to judge which bright spark has the best costume or outfit. Nerve and really bad taste may be just as important as flair and style! Along the route you will be guided by the trusty band of Pride stewards decked out in their bright yellow tabards - with STEWARD tastefully emblazoned across the front of them.

Gordon Rainsford

We Want You

Of course, the steward bit is where you come in again. If there are no stewards there ain't no march! We need your help. To offer your services for the Parade, the Park, part of the day or all of it, please contact Kevin Hunter on 071 738 8862

Assemble between Temple & Embankment
Tubes, from 1pm.

From Embankment, right into Northumberland Ave. Out of Northumberland
Ave. and left into Trafalgar Square.

Bill Walker

Straight down Whitehall, passing Downing Street.

Left into Parliament Square and into Bridge Street.

Across Westminster Bridge and into Westminster Bridge Road.
Hang a right into Kennington Road and carry right on up to Kennington Park.

COME TO THE CABARET

Age cannot wither nor custom stale the infinite variety of the Cabaret Tent. For the seventh year running, this is where we present the music, theatre, dance, comedy and poetry which lesbians and gay men (and their friends) are creating and performing the rest of the year in arts centres, women's venues, theatres, 'alternative' clubs, etc. up and down the country.

This is a particularly rich year for new talent, with fourteen names making their debut at Pride - including belly dancers, a clown and an improvisational comedy team. One particular innovation is the Poets' Corner, which features five very fine lesbian poets.

The new faces will be mixed with favourites from previous years; with thirty (yes, thirty!) acts appearing, there's something for everybody.

One sadness is that we've had to turn down some very fine performers for sheer pressure of time; making the choice is never easy, and I'm the person to blame if you think the overall balance is wrong. I very much hope that those we've had to say "No" to won't be discouraged from putting themselves forward for next year, and all suggestions from you, the punters, will be carefully considered.

The event as for the last four years will be mainly compered by Mistress of Ceremonies Extraordinaire Viv Acious, and me. Be there or be cuboid.

Eric Presland

LILY'S TEA PARTY

Brendan Murphy and Jeremy Joseph invite you to come to Lily Savage's tea party; unlike the Queen's teaparty, where you have to dress for the occasion, for this one all you need to wear is a smile - and perhaps a headscarf. Tea will be served all afternoon (and there will be a bar for those of you who wish to take something stronger with your muffins.)

Lily will be baking the cakes to her own special recipe which for some unknown reason always seems to be so popular, and no doubt she'll be eating her fair share. Party games will also be played, and everyone will be expected to join in (with no exceptions).

Lily advises a visit to Argos, to stock up on the necessary biros for Prize Bingo.

Jeremy, and Lily herself, will be playing the music, including some of Lily's favourites: from the 30s, when she was duetting with Vera Lynn; from the 40s, when she was entertaining the troops; from the 50s, when she was rockin' and rollin' as a pick'n'mix girl in Woolworth's; from the 60s, when the Beatles were her warm-up act; from the 70s, when she came second to Abba in the Eurovision Song Contest; from the 80s, when she decided that her talents should be taken into the pubs and clubs; and from the 90s, when she did the Acid remix of The Birdie Song.

During the afternoon, Lily will be judging a pick-pocketing competition; all her friends who she has done time with will be there. So please join Lily, Jeremy, HIH Regina Fong, Adrella, Millie, Katrina and the Boy, Dave Lynn....

See you on the day, unless you're a Jehovah's Witness or a Raver, when you are cordially invited not to attend.

Lily's Special Brew will be poured from 3pm onwards.

Thank you,
Brendan and Jeremy

OPEN STAGE LINE-UP - SO FAR

Nomad

In the charts with Just a Groove which has followed I Wanna Give You Devotion. They even re-arranged their Scandinavian Tour to play for us, now that's Devotion!!

Hazel Dean

One of Britain's foremost disco divas making a welcome return to Pride's open stage.

Soul Family Sensation

SFS operate within the wide parameters of dance, also offering the seductive impression that anything is possible. I don't even know if... is their current hit.

Adeola

A singer and songwriter with roots in Blues, Jazz, Funk and Dance music, combined with her articulate lyrics yield a unique sound.

When She Calls

A three woman band that combine fiddle, mandolin and guitars with vocals to produce a varied acoustic sound.

Funking Barstewards

All the 70's hits that you love to hate (or hate to love) wildly executed by a Glam Clan of nine fab musicians.

Ultra Violet

Dance sounds from Big Life, She released a single in May which is bound for success.

Quando Quando

A heady mix of Latin, Petula Clarke and the Carpenters, guaranteed to send you humming and dancing.

Sierra Nevadas

From the plains of Peckham to the Yuppie saloon bars of Islington, nobody's heard of the Sierra Nevadas. The best kept secret in country and western. Now the secret is OUT.

Rita Lynch

This woman has certainly lived, from a burning desire to be a nun at 12 to leading Rita and the Piss Artists at 21 Older and wiser now, she still maintains raw honesty in her music.

Bunnie

Bibby-Bobbly Bunnie will delight you with her DELICIOUS performance. Listing Divine and Alcohol as her two main influences!!

Paul Akkerman

Paul is 19. Proud to be part of this festival and everything it stands for.

The Beach

Set simply against Miriam Mackies atmospheric piano, the voice of Liz Skillings reaches out and touches hearts and minds.

Waka Waka

A London based dance band, influenced by Jazz, Latin African and Funk music. It's a wild and funky celebration!!

Rita Lynch

Pinkietessa

Pinkietessa's the girl with all the cheesecake! But most decidedly she is not as dumb as she is blonde.

Hinano

Gifted jazz vocalist. After performing in Australia for five years she is now much in demand on the London night club scene.

Honeychile

A fusion of funk, house, rap and go-go that proves the best grooves can still be played on real instruments. Their 1st single Stepping Stone was one of the club sounds of 1990.

It's breaking out all over! Among the towns and cities holding their own festivities for the first time are Newcastle and Southampton. Bill Walshe takes a look around.

Pride North

Newcastle's Pride North committee started off with a Valentine's Day celebration back in February. Now they are hoping that their latest venture will quickly become a wild annual event, attracting lesbians and gay men from all over the country. The march from Newcastle Quayside will be followed by a rally in Exhibition Park with live music, hosted by Huffy. There'll be a playbus for the kids, plus Pride North T-shirts and goodies on sale. Pride North get some funding from the Lesbian and Gay Committee of Nalgo, but they still have to do some fundraising of their own, so look out for collectors in a pub or club near you and give generously to ensure the success of "Pride North".

March from Newcastle
Quayside 1pm, Saturday
15th June
Rally in Exhibition Park afterwards.

Southampton Pride

In Southampton one brave sole, Roy Towler with help from Tony at the local Switchboard, has decided to enter the ring for the first time. Roy has managed to talk David Moss and his staff, at the Magnum Club in St. Mary's Road, into holding a gala Pride night. Frankie Steel will be compering the cabaret, with half price drinks until midnight, raffle, blind date, and much more. Entry £1.50. Wednesday 5th June. Open until 2.00am. Pride 91 shirts and goodies available.

Also in the thick of it are the crowd at the Robert Burns pub on South Front, with their celebrations on Sunday 9th June. A popular women's venue, everyone is invited for an action packed afternoon between midday and 3.00pm.

For more information on any of the above, contact Roy Towler on Southampton (0703) 864665.

Liverpool

Once again, Liverpool will be out and proud in 1991, showing the straights how to do it in a week long festival of events in the city. Last year's Pride week brought together a whole range of experience in a diversity of events on and out of the scene. This year's programme is built upon the strengths and successes of 1990 and promises to attract even bigger audiences and greater acclaim! People will be coming together to debate, have fun and most importantly, celebrate.

Highlights of last year were the campness of the Tea Dance, the hilarious Cabaret and the riotous Quiz. All these events will be repeated on a grander scale plus much more (see listings), with something to interest everyone. As we go to press, some venues and times have still to be confirmed.

A programme is available from Liverpool Pride 91, PO Box 110, Liverpool L69 6AU, or you can call Robert Alldritt on 051 229 5374 between 9.00am and 2.00pm or Dawn Brayford, during office hours, on 051 707 1404.

For those who don't know; Rob Kinnon and Julian Mellor, co-ordinators of the 15-strong organising committee of Avon Pride, tell me that Avon is the region around the Bristol Channel, between Weston-super-Mare and Slough; and quite an area it is too!

This year, they are holding their 15th annual Pride celebrations. Avon Pride originally started as a benefit for the infamous Gay News trial back in 1979. It was known as the Gay Bristol Festival until 1985, when they made the commitment to an annual Pride celebration. Rob Kinnon told me, "Avon Pride has dual benefit and purpose these days: as a means of bringing people together from as far apart as Exeter and Swansea, and as an excellent means of fundraising for the many local groups and agencies."

Over 2,000 participants are expected at this year's bash, being staged by every group in the region - from the radical lesbian feminists to the local leathermen.

According to Julian, "Avon Pride may not have one of the biggest attendance of an event in this region, but it's one of the most popular. In last year's readership poll by Venue, the regional listing magazine, Pride was voted 4th most popular event, beating the Glastonbury Festival into 5th position!"

Cottrells, 15 Charlotte Street, London, W1, are dental suppliers who stock dental dams in lavender, pink or blue, flavoured with bubblegum or vanilla. £7.65 for a box of 36.
They do seem to be blissfully unaware of why lesbians should want them, so you may wish to enlighten them, but can you really be bothered?

Lesbians and Aids. Most people don't know anything about it, including the medical profession. It's very difficult to find out anything for yourself, either from books or from doctors and clinics.

But this lack of information has not prevented the sex 'experts' saturating the gay press with warnings that lesbians should now be engaging in safer sex techniques. There is no actual clarification on what safer sex techniques may involve, there is just a general assumption that all lesbians are already well informed on issues related to Aids and its transmission, and indeed that they share the same attitudes or sexual practices.

Despite the increase in lesbian publications that signal a move to put the erotic back into sex, many lesbians still hesitate to speak frankly about sex. Debates specifically around lesbian sexuality have taken place in the context of a general challenge to feminist sexual orthodoxy. In participating in these debates, many lesbians have become aware of the absence of language that can deal with different lesbian sexualities. These differences have not been sufficiently addressed by the advocates of lesbian safer sex.

And how on earth can we talk about safer sex, when we haven't yet talked about sex?

At the best of times, information for lesbians about Aids is pitifully inadequate. Due to lack of conclusive information and research, the information that has so far been produced, far from being informative, has become a cause for much anxiety and worry.

Lesbians are receiving information about Aids and safer sex that gay men dismissed several years ago. It is not enough to simply regurgitate a list of do's and don'ts, or to advocate the use of dental dams en masse, without actually examining and questioning the content and attitudes that exist behind the safer sex campaigns.

Lesbians are getting caught up in the moral panic that has been whipped up around the issues of Aids. Yes, the Aids virus and its related issues are serious indeed, but is it not time we began to challenge some of the content and nature of the Aids commentary?

Lesbians have got to develop a culture and establish an informative framework that will provide protection and support. It is time to shake off the legacy of the women's movement and talk frankly about lesbian sexual activity and the part it plays in our lives.

We have got to insist that lesbians are sexual subjects, sexual actors, sexual agents. We have to insist that our experiences are neither a blank, nor a mere repetition of what has been said about us. The pleasure we have experienced should be used as a guide, encouraging the acquisition of knowledge and resisting sexual ignorance. We have to do this ourselves. To wait until a zone of safety has been established before we begin to explore and organise for pleasure is to give up our sexuality, and to admit that we are weaker and more frightened than our enemies ever imagined.

In October 1989, the Terrence Higgins Trust printed a report on the 5th International Conference on AIDS, Montreal. Denise Ribble from the Lesbian and Gay Community Services Centre, New York, presented details of two women with HIV who cite sex with an infected woman as their sole risk activity.

The report also states, "in one case, sex included activities likely to draw blood. In the other case, the only risk activity was cunnilingus, not during but possibly immediately after menstruation."

"Vaginal fluid after the period is likely to contain traces of blood."

"The vaginal fluid of an infected woman contains more virus if yeast infections are present."

THE 'WE REALLY WANT TO DO IT' KIT

B Fisher of Quim Magazine looks at what there is and when to use it

HIV is here. You can't see it but it is killing our friends. If it hasn't directly affected you, let's keep it that way: practise safer sex. It also cuts down on the chances of contracting herpes and genital warts. Safer sex can't always be fun, fun, fun and spontaneous, but it is necessary. Just make it a habit, not an issue.

The risk of contracting HIV does not decrease with familiarity, so just because you fall in love, doesn't mean you can stop practising safer sex.

Latex gloves: Cuts on your fingers? Hang nails. Long manicured talons? Or maybe you're gonna engage in fist-fucking. Well, you never know, so keep your gloves next to the bed. Try getting replacements free at your local STD clinic. Make them aware of the demand.

Dental dams: Use a dental dam if you're gonna go down and you have cuts in your mouth; bleeding gums; mouth ulcers; cold sores, or if she's on her period, dammit. They are amazingly hard to get hold of, but make an effort. Or try snipping the fingers off a latex glove and away you go. But it does still taste like a balloon, so for those special occasions try the real McCoy dental dams in bubblegum or vanilla flavour. They come in three thicknesses - go for the thinnest.

Condoms: Add more than a touch of reality to all dildo oriented sex!! They let you have anal and vaginal sex in the same session, and you can share sex toys, but you must keep changing the condom. You can get them pre-lubricated but avoid ones coated with non-oxyl 9. It does destroy the virus but it also kills off good bacteria and is a known irritant. Which slides us neatly into:

Lube: Use it, loads of it. It will prevent cuts and tears in sensitive places and generally loosens everything up a bit. I personally recommend KY. It is non irritant, doesn't taste too disgusting and is water based. This is vital when using latex, as oil based lube will rot it! (something to bear in mind when trying to disguise the flavour of your dental dam - lay off the peanut butter.)

AN ARTISTIC BENT

As part of the wider celebrations of Lesbian and Gay Pride this year, the London Borough of Camden Arts and Entertainments service in association with Visible Images is staging an open exhibition of work by lesbian and gay artists, titled, appropriately enough, The Pride Show. It features the work of 37 artists working in a wide variety of media, drawn from all over the U.K.

"The idea for the show grew from an exhibition called Working Out, which was part of the Lesbian Strength and Gay Pride Festival held in north London last June," Andrew Dowell, co-ordinator for Camden, told us. "The artists involved have stayed together, naming the group Visible Images".

The subjects of this year's show are informed by the different aspects of our sexuality and the media involved range from painting to photo-montage, from sculpture to tapestry. As a natural aspect of the show's development, there has been no attempt to define what might be expected from a lesbian or gay artist, or indeed what the end result might be.

The exhibition runs between the 1st and 29th June. In addition there will be a special screening of film and video submissions on Saturday 15th June.

The whole show is happening at the Exhibition Hall in Swiss Cottage Library, 88 Avenue Road, NW3. Nearest tube is Swiss Cottage. The hall is closed on Wednesday and Sunday only and entry is free.

Below: Waiting for things to warm up (oil paint) Peter Forder
Two Women (tapestry) Dilys Stinson

Building on the artistic theme, this year for the first time one of the marquees at the Kennington Park celebrations will be dedicated to the work of more lesbian and gay artists. The idea for the exhibition grew from a liaison between Pride and Carolyn Murray, an Exhibitions Co-ordinator based in Liverpool. Originally designed as a quiet area away from the main action, the forthcoming exhibition as Carolyn described it, will be "...loosely based around the theme of pride, but allowing the individual artist the fullest range for their potential."

The work has been selected by a panel of lesbians and gays and has proved quite a challenge to put together. It was an idea Carolyn had been mulling over for some time, but the decision to try and mount the show was taken only a few months ago with subsequently more than a little difficulty in contacting artists, all over the country, to invite them to submit work.

Carolyn's latest project has grown from her experiences in trying to contact the many artists spread all over the U.K. "What my experience of this exhibition has demonstrated is the need for a lesbian and gay artists network. A forum for artists to congregate, exchange ideas and develop any history we may have - networking not just on a social level." She believes there is a need for a database of supportive venues, an archive of past activities and information on researching and organising exhibitions.

Anyone interested in an artists network can contact Carolyn Murray via Pride's mailing address: BM Pride, London WC1N 3XX.

"Strength to Love"

I believe that Lesbian and Gay Pride has three fundamental objectives: to widen social contacts between the lesbian and gay community, by joining together in a friendly celebratory event; to bring about a change of attitudes amongst the public, and to dispel ignorance and foster positive attitudes towards homosexuality; and to show the rest of society the power, sincerity and strength of our message.

Unfortunately, in the financial world, as with many other aspects of society, there exists rigid sex role stereotypes which are limiting for both sexes. The financial services industry is not known for its tolerance and acceptance of change. It is an industry of social and sexual stereotypes, seeking to perpetuate deep-set values. The industry feels threatened by confrontation of any kind.

Five years in insurance has enabled me to see how the business works from the inside. Whenever applications arrived from clients who might have been gay men or lesbians, they were handled in a flippant way. Second-class treatment for second-class citizens. This narrow-mindedness has worsened as Aids hysteria is whipped up into demands for restrictive controls and practices upon us all. In fact, for almost all investment products, whether or not someone is HIV positive is absolutely irrelevant.

To combat this discrimination I set up my own firm of independent financial advisers, Bowater Massow (Financial Planning Service), licensed by FIMBRA. We are proud to be the first company from the 'straight and narrow' financial services industry to sponsor Pride.

We have a clear commitment to changing the financial sector's attitude to gay and lesbian investors generally. If we approach 'straight' firms like insurance companies individually, then misunderstanding will continue. But if we approach them collectively and uniformly, then we can change both the firms' attitudes and the services they offer. It is important that industry and commerce generally should realise our potential value and strength in the market place.

The industry's apparent intolerance and resistance to change has recently been highlighted by comments in the media. Many people believe that any person who chooses to test for HIV is maintaining a lifestyle that warrants caution and is, therefore, a high risk. This should not be a subject for debate. An individual may wish to test for any number of reasons. Knowing you are HIV positive can be a life-saver not only for the person concerned but for their current and future partners. Conversely, once someone who is not HIV positive understands the dangers they are not likely to practise unsafe sex. This is the sort of person I would insure if I were an underwriter.

Media attitudes may well frighten any conscientious person considering a test into believing that they may be discriminated against when they apply for life insurance or a mortgage. I hope this will not stop anyone from going for a test for fear of jeopardising their future financial arrangement. There are ways around points like this.

Should people be forced to complete a lifestyle questionnaire and should they be discriminated against if they are considered to be high risk (possibly because of unrepresentative Aids mortality figures)? The blanket assessment of vulnerability of these high risk groups is compared with that of being a smoker. This is to suggest that homosexuals choose to be gay and could give it up with three Nicobrevin - and is ridiculous.

What is more important is to ascertain a person's sexual promiscuity rather than their sexual preference. There is no such thing as a high risk group, only high risk behaviour. It is time that people realised that, in order to protect and insure, the financial industry may well have to start asking 'socially unacceptable' questions rather than scapegoating a responsible community.

I would have thought, in a caring society, (one which we are campaigning for now) the main aim was to create an environment in which the ever-present challenge of Aids, and the problems of caring sympathetically for people with HIV and Aids, must be addressed simultaneously.

Unfortunately there would appear to be a vein within our society which makes people resistant to change on issues that have deeply moral implications - such as homosexuality and Aids.

Aids, unlike other life-threatening illnesses, has characteristics which makes sufferers particularly vulnerable to disapproval. Moreover, with the increasing public awareness of HIV infection, there is a real danger that sufferers may be held to account as responsible for their infection because of their lifestyle.

In confronting these issues openly and taking the lead in discussing them, our organisation prides itself on being able to offer professional advice to those people who have exacting demands. We are proud to be associated with people who share a conviction and commitment to tolerance and social change and we are pleased to be able to give our support to the Lesbian and Gay Pride Festival for 1991.
