

MSc Applied Public Health

Part-time
100% online

Online Study

The course

Duration: 2 years

3 start dates per year:
January, May and September

Total course fee: £8,300

Students will:

- Master research in public health and apply theoretical perspectives to real-world issues
- Understand health factors, inequalities, and evidence-based approaches using epidemiological and statistical methods
- Learn to assess, protect, and improve population health, including evaluating initiatives and effectively using media for information sharing

Graduates could access opportunities in the:

- Public sector, eg national health services, health promotion units, public health departments, community health services, hospitals, local government, academic and research organisations, civil services
- Private sector, eg private and independent health services and organisations, as well as consultancy firms
- Third sector, eg health focused charities and social enterprise agencies

For more information visit onlinestudy.uclan.ac.uk

Dreaming about a promotion or want to take your career in a new direction?

UCLan is an international University tracing its roots back to 1828. Achieve your goals with our part-time, online postgraduate courses.

13th in the UK
for Health Studies

(Complete University Guide 2024)

*University of Central Lancashire (UCLan)

80 million

The World Health Organisation (WHO) projects that by 2030 the global demand for health workers will rise to 80 million