

HOW-TO GUIDE

Create a personal OED account

You can still create a personal account, even if you have access to content via a library subscription, or if you don't intend to purchase your own subscription. By creating a personal account, you can set display preferences, save searches to run again later, contribute feedback, and set your marketing preferences. For more detail, watch our ‘How to create a personal OED account’ video.

Then click
'Register'

Click on the sign in button
at the top of the page

A screenshot of the Oxford English Dictionary website showing the 'Register' form. The form is titled 'Register' and has a sub-header 'Already have an account? Sign in'. It contains several input fields: 'Name (required)', 'Email (required)', 'Country of residence (required)' (with a dropdown menu showing 'United Kingdom'), 'Password (required)', and 'Confirm Password (required)'. Below the password fields, there is a checkbox for 'I would like to receive the Oxford English Dictionary email newsletter and other related email marketing from Oxford University Press'. At the bottom of the form, there is a 'Register' button. Red dotted lines point from the 'Register' button to the 'Then click 'Register'' callout and from the 'Sign in' button to the 'Click on the sign in button' callout.

Fill in your details and click 'Register'
at the bottom of the page.
You will now
be able to sign in

If you already have an account on the Oxford Academic platform, or if you have purchased products from the OUP online catalogue, you can use those details to log into an account on OED without creating a new one.
