The Streets are coloured according to the general condition of the inhabitants, as under:-

 Lowest class. Vicious, semi-criminal.	 Fairly comfortable. Good ordinary earnings.
 Very poor, casual. Chronic want.	 Middle-class. Well-to-do.
 Poor. 18s. to 21s. a week for a moderate family.	 Upper-middle and Upper classes. Wealthy.
 Mixed. Some comfortable, others poor.

A combination of colours— as dark blue and black, or pink and red— indicates that the street contains a fair proportion of each of the classes represented by the respective colours.

Royal Marines.
They have shared in the glories of the great struggles in the past, and have been conspicuous for their gallantry and discipline in our modern warfare. They are equally at home on the marching lines in the streets of a great battle, or in the trenches, or advancing over difficult terrain with their comrades of the infantry. Their proud march down a long file of 400 yards, and, amongst the great 400-yard struggle will suggest terms to their already famous history. For more far freedom in their badge, for their own satisfaction, and their own responsibility is an attribute to their sea-training.

In 1904, the Registrar General decided that where a child was born in the workhouse, this did not need to be shown on the birth certificate. Instead, the place of birth could be recorded as an ordinary street address, either a real one or one invented for the purpose. The address given for children born in the Chelsea Workhouse was 250 King's Road.
