THOMAS CONRY, Treasurer.  Strokestown, September 19, 1829.  Laniel Kelly, Esq. Cargins,  | despatched from Adrimople on the 21st for that purpose, the intelligence of the event must have reached Constantinople by the 26th.  Despatches were also received at the same office from Dawkins, at Egina, dated the let instant. They loform us that the irregular Greek troops, who had maturided for want of pay, in the vicinity of Thebes, had returned to their quarters and their duty.  *From the Standard of Wednesday.  As there are still doubts in the City with regard to the armistice between the Russians and Turks, we communicate flom a source of innormation the has never deceived us, the following information: — Whiter the commissioners arrived at the Russian head-quarters, the Commander-in-Chief, Count Diebitch asked them what propositions they had to make? Their answer was, that the Sultan left it entirely to the direction of the Emperor of Russia, to make his own terms; upon which Count Diebitch singed the similar to the City of Aug., and hostilities ceased." The terms are not yet known; as they must come from St. Petersburgh, the Emperor may dictate what he please.  A respectable, and generally well-informed contemporary, The Morning Journal, contrains the following paragraph:—  "We have great satisfaction in announcing that new ministry is on the eve of being formed, which he distinguished for high Tory principles and statechment to the Protestant cause and the interests of the church. Sir James Scarlet, of ourse, retires. We congratefale the country on the prospect now opened to them, convinced that a return to the old principles can alone save England! A dissolution of Parliament is inevitable."  We have no direct knowledge of the fact, but that perhaps' does not impeach the likelihood of the strangement suggested. We coafess that we are not anxious to get rid of the ministry in the prospect now opened to them, convinced that a return to the old principles can alone save England! A dissolution of Parliament is inevitable."  It would seem that the ensuin Fish of November will be celebrated with extraord | is expected will have the effect of uniting all men of property in the good Government of the Country, and removing the necessity of contine-ting an encormous military establishment is Ireland.  The test years allowed for the one of the old Weights and Measures, under Mr. Peel's Act, are nearly expired, and the public must be cautious how they use say other than the liapsets, as there are penalties affected, of which we doubt not the informer will such the control of the control  |
