Dear Year 6,

Just a quick note about next week!

As a year group you have shown such resilience and determination this year and I am so proud of each and every one of you. You have all shown that you can cope well with stressful and unknown situations and have all shown such courage at tricky points. Each of you has demonstrated huge strength of character and it is this strength that you have already shown which demonstrates how all of you will be fine next week!

Each and every one of you have come a long way and made real progress in all areas of your learning. Think back to what you were achieving in September and compare that to now! ALL of you are capable of reaching your full potential next week and need to believe in your own capabilities. Don't think of next week as something to be dreaded, but think of it as a celebration of everything you have learnt and achieved in Key Stage 2.

As Monday comes closer it is natural that you may feel a little apprehensive. Try and stay focussed and keep a determined mind rather than dwelling on feelings of anxiety and worry. At the end of the day we are all in this together and you are not on your own. There will be staff and friends there to support you through all of next week.

Make sure you continue with small amounts of revision, but most importantly make sure you give yourself timeout over the weekend – it is important to rest and recharge ready for next week. Ride your bike, watch a film, have a lazy bath and/or spend time with your family!

You are all unique individuals and all have unique gifts and abilities. SATS only test one set of abilities and although you will feel very differently about them and have very different strengths and abilities the one thing we can ALL do is remember we are all in it together. I have faith and confidence in every one of you no matter your ability. So remember to walk into SATs week with your head held high and with that positive attitude.

We can do this and we will do it together!

Have a good, relaxing weekend and I'm looking forward to serving you breakfast at 8am Monday morning.
