The recently appointed school leadership team has worked tirelessly during this academic year to address previous staffing issues, and to develop a culture where all staff have high expectations of pupils' behaviour and their academic achievement.

The quality of teaching is good, and has improved since the previous inspection. Teachers are trained well and have good subject knowledge.

The school is a calm, harmonious place where pupils grow and become increasingly mature.

Standards have improved significantly during this academic year. Pupils now make good progress in reading, writing and mathematics.

The well-established 'One World, One School' ethos ensures that pupils are taught to respect and be tolerant of other faiths and cultures.
