Dear Mr Johnson

My wife and I had the great pleasure to attend the school's nativity play yesterday as the grandparents of We were expecting a "lump in the throat" experience but we were completely bowled over by the production of the Christmas story and the superb performances of every one of the children involved. It entirely exceeded our expectations and we want to put on record our thanks and congratulations to everyone involved.

My wife is a retired teacher and could readily envisage the demands made on the staff by the production and the patience required. I as a non-teacher was simply entranced by the whole event and the evident enjoyment the children got from performing.

As traditionalists we were also heartened by the simplicity and accuracy of the Christmas story and the absence of extraneous and unnecessary modern inputs. We don't know who were the librettists and composers but the songs and music were exactly right and added enormously to the performance - congratulations to them.

I could go on eulogising about a most memorable event but perhaps I should summarise our feelings by saying that you have every reason to be proud of both your staff and the children since the performance yesterday was quite simply superb.

Very best wishes for a Happy Christmas and a peaceful New Year.
