The Jungle Book

It was 7 o' clock on a warm evening in the seeonee hills. A father wolf woke up, then he stretched, scratched himself, yawned and stretched his paws. He absquatulated to hunt for food. Mother wolf layed –with her big gray nose-dropping across her four tumbling cubs. Then Jackal entered the cave and gave birth to loving baby cubs.

Father wolf said “come into the cave, and have a look.” He wasn't happy to see Tabaqui although he was being polite. Tabaqui explained that he was not important and that he is very poor. Just then he spotted a shiny bone. Once he had the bone he trotted of whilst saying that he has beautiful children.

Father wolf announced that it is a bad thing to do, and by the law you can't choose and change the place where you hunt for food. He hunts for cows instead of wild animals (which is what the villagers need). Now all of the villagers are looking all over the place for him.

Father wolf thinks that he is so stupid to make such a lot of wracket. And that he is not hunting for food to-night. Suddenly the tiger was making a weird noise- which was coming from every direction-. It made the villagers run into the tiger's mouth (he showed his bright white sharp teeth).

They were all now just talking about him that he is weak and he is poor. All of a sudden father wolf heard a noise so he ascertain he attached a man –who was cutting wood-. Just then there was something heading towards them. They were all ready but there was no more any noise.
