

Africa Alive

Today we had a visit from Africa Alive's Sam because we were learning about Africa.

First, she showed us the Royal Python snake skin and then the reticulated python skin which was over two meters long and that amazed me! After that, she let us hold a hissing cockroach called Charlie. I was a little nervous to start with but then I got over my fear.

Secondly, we saw some elephant dung in glass and an ostrich egg which was as heavy as a brick. Later on, we got to touch a leopard tortoise and it was super cute. I felt really excited about what we were doing next.

Finally, we got to see a lion foot print and two porcupine quills which looked like chopsticks. Next, we got to stroke a spiny tail dabb lizard and he didn't stop smiling. I t became scared it would have inflated itself.

My favourite bit was when we got to stroke the leopard tortoise because it was the cutest thing ever.
