

SCRIPT: VOICEOVER

Every company is a technology company, regardless of what product or service it provides.

In this age of digital transformation no company can make, deliver or market its products efficiently without technology.

This applies to financial institutions as well. In order to survive this transformation, banks have no option but to use technology to improve online interactions with customers.