

QUEEN MEL PRESENTS

THREE DIMENSIONAL

A ONE HOUR – DRAMEDY

Tagline: “Life is a rollercoaster, just enjoy the ride”

The feeling of true human connection is such a rewarding experience. Outside of family and romantic relationships, friendship is one of the most meaningful bonds one can have. That’s why people have always been drawn to Nayla; friendship isn’t just an experience with her, it’s genuine. She values every person she chooses to connect with. Through personal ups and downs, Nayla always manages to be there for her friends. When you need her, and when you think you don’t. She’s a caring, naive, optimistic, kindhearted soul; ultimately making her an easy target for emotional manipulation. If you’re anything like Nayla, you tend to get taken advantage of. Thankfully, her two best friends Zahra & Imani are always by her side to keep her grounded. Even when their own lives are filled with chaos. (They all have that in common). It’s rare to find one person like that, but somehow Nayla managed to find two.

Based on true events, an Inspired take on UPN’s Girlfriends, with a unique K drama twist: Three Dimensional

Set in the heart of downtown Toronto, the series follows the lives of young adults through the intricacies of their romantic/platonic relationships. Through these three diverse women, viewers will travel the world through their eyes and understand their individual experiences as they navigate their twenties. With all life’s ups and downs, you won’t be able to help but feel connected to them and their story. Why? Because there’s a Zahra, Imani, and Nayla in everyone.

Nayla is the mind & heart of the group. She loves unapologetically, even when she shouldn’t. Wearing her heart on her sleeve without boundaries, leaves her ending up in MANY toxic situations. Her consistent optimism leads her to never believe a red flag. She can be a mess sometimes, some may say she’s an “emotional train wreck”. Hey, nobody’s perfect.

Zahra is the peacemaker, the body of the group. When she interacts with others, she always tries to understand life from differing perspectives. She’s cool, far more mature & intellectual than your average 21-year-old and she strives to maintain peace and harmony in all her relationships.

As much as she can be Nayla’s peace, she has a lot going on in her personal life. Being the young daughter in a cultural home with a misogynistic older brother is one thing, having a father who passed of suicide leaving no explanation behind only 6 months ago, is another. Emphasis on a lot going on. She’s very stubborn with her opinions and closed off emotionally. Guys often find her difficult to connect with, but lately, she is ready to go when it comes to sex. They call her a “man-eater”, some say her personality is like an on and off switch.

Imani is the spiritual & insightful one of the three. Imani represents awareness. She will hold that mirror up in front of you and show you who you are. People hate that. On the other hand, she is genuinely always there to help you if it leads towards your personal growth. She wants everyone to find their purpose and to feel fulfilled. She’s a go-getter who lights up every room with her loud personality and infectious humor.

With that being said, she can often come off judgmental and critical. She thinks she knows everything, (most of the time she does) but other times, she doesn’t. Her crass tendencies can be counterproductive and can leave a bad taste in people’s mouths. She just can’t seem to grasp why people can’t see things through her lens. It all seems so simple! But is it?

The first season follows Nayla’s journey through the seven stages of her breakup after she admits to being unfaithful to her boyfriend of 2 years. Imani’s life, as always is filled with the chaos that follows her friends and family. It is always a situation that is unimaginable with Imani to the rescue. On the other hand, Zahra is dealing with a college love scandal, her mom's mental health, and the traumas left behind due to her father’s suicide. With the undeniable tone of nostalgia, you won’t be able to help yourself but fall for the 90s/2000’s aesthetic, the infectious personalities of characters, and their mind-bending stories.

LOGLINE: Following a huge moral dilemma, Nayla’s relationship goes into a downward spiral. Desperate to get her life back on track, she leans on her two best friends Zahra & Imani for emotional support. However, in their lives lies chaos of its own...
