The Wellington Club relaunch

BY BYSTANDER

MONDAY 11 MARCH 2019

Last week saw The Wellington Club (the Welly to those in the know) re-opening at a brand new location at 91 Jermyn Street, in a collaboration between former City professional Nic Brooks and iconic socialite and nightclub owner Jake Panayiotou. Hugh Warrender was one of the first to host a bash there, celebrating his birthday on Thursday. The evening saw guests including Tatler contributing editor Olivia McCall, Rosco Balfour and Didi Ilse dancing to music by Clarter with special guest Bill Lovelady, with the drinks flowing until the early hours. Established in 1832, the original Wellington Club has a storied history - in 1974 Lord Lucan was last seen there, while Kate Moss, Jude Law and Bono were all frequent guests in the 2000s. As with the original, the new establishment has an impressive collection of Damien Hirst pieces - including the famous 'Disco Skull' as well as 'The Hours', a rare large-scale print.
